Turkish Hijackers Give Up, Release Passengers in Sofia

SOFIA, Oct. 23 (UPI).-Four yesterday morning on a flight Turkish hijackers surrendered today, ending a two-day ordeal for planeload of hostages they threatened to blow up with the aircraft, BTA, the official Bulgarian news agency, reported. The four gave themselves up after holding the passengers and crew of a Turkish Airlines Boeing-707 at gunpoint since yesterday morning.

The four men surrendered to Bulgarian authorities, BTA said, and were brought before journalists. The 63 passengers and crewmen on the sircraft were released unbarmed.

Earlier tonight, doctors were allowed aboard the airliner and later reported that several of the ngers were suffering neryous effects from their ordeal but were otherwise well.

The hijackers, all university students, told officials in Sofia that their aim was to "tear down the Turkish regime and set up a Marxist-Leninist system." Officials here said they would be granted political asylum in Bulgaria. BTA said. "All the necessary measures have been taken to assure the safe and rapid return of the passengers, crew and plane to Turkey." The surrender came after lengthy negotiations between the hijackers and Bulgarian officials. "The government of the People's Republic of Eulgaria made every effort and succeeded in preventing the tragic consequences of any possible acts of the armed persons who hijacked the plane,". The hijackers had twice set deadlines for the Turkish government to meet their demands. They had threatened to blow up the plane and everyone aboard should Turkey reject them.

The deadlines passed without incident after the Turkish government announced that it would not negotiate with the four men. The hijackers commandeered the Turkish Airlines Boeing-707 early

> There is widespread relief that, after many months of delay, agreement to talk has finally been reached. The recent cliff-hanging was a source of some friction between the United States and its NATO partners, and the evident understanding reached between President. Nixon and the Soviet party leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev, on crucial policy matters, had beested the fears of many European countries that a U.S.-Soviet deal would be reached.

Late Difficulties Until today's announcement was made there was a strong im-pression that the United States would prefer to discuss troop cuts with Moscow on a bilateral basis, leaving U.S. alles to cool their beels until agreement was Today's announcement had been expected for the last week. There were, however, last-minute diffi-culties with the NATO allies on the southern flank: Italy, Greece and Turkey.

The U.S. has taken the view that the talks would proceed more successfully if there were as few as possible round the negotiating table, but these three countries insisted on being represented in the troop-level discussions.

It has taken time to get them to agree to a formula which allows them to be represented on a rotation basis and with the right to speak at certain points of what are clearly going to be deeply complex and difficult negotistions.

No site for the mutual and balanced force reduction talks has yet been fixed. Geneva has been proposed, but the U.S. is known to have reservations about this and prefers instead to hold them in Vienna.

The U.S. has made clear to its allies its fear that the security conference might become inextricably mixed up with troop reduction talks. Should this happen, Washington is understood to believe that both would be a failure. An understanding with Moscow seems to have been reached, however; that the security conference preparations (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

36 Soviet Jews Are Notified That Exit Tax Will Be Waived

MOSCOW, Oct. 23 (AP) .-Thirty-six Soviet Jews-including a man separated from his American bride-were told today that they could leave Russia without paying a special tax, Jewish sources reported. The "diploma tax" now has been waived for 175 persons since the United States and the Soviet Union signed a trade agreement last week. There was still no indication, however, that the authorities had repealed the tax. Among the 36 who were told today that they could leave without paying the government-estimated cost of their higher education was Gavriel Shapiro.

Swing to Christian Democrats Seen

Setback for Brandt Allies in Local Voting

By Joe Alex Morris

BONN, Oct, 23 .- Christian Democratic hopes of overthrowing Chancellor Willy Brandt's Social-Liberal coalition in national elections next month were given a boost in local elections yesterday.

The Christian Democrats made substantial gains in local polls in the states of Hesse and Lower Saxony in which one out of every five German voters participated. Mr. Brandt's Social Democratic party also scored gains, but his Free Democratic allies saw their sbare of the vote slashed.

Officials in all three parties cautioned against attaching undue significance to the local elections. which are fought on different issues from the national vote on Nov. 19. But the Free Democrats had been hoping for a significant increase in their share of the poll.

However, the Free Democrats suffered a 4 percent drop in Hesse and a 2.5 percent loss in Lower Saxony. As a result, Foreign Minister and party leader Walter Scheel found himself expressing his "astonishment" at the results as his party's congress opened in Freiburg. He had hoped to be able to use the results as another example of the resurgence of the Free Democrats-

Nixon Promises to Use Veto, Hold Spending to $250 Billion

By Albert B. Crenshaw

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Oct. 23 (UPI).—President Nixon said toony he would use his veto power and authority to withhold appropriated funds in an effort to limit government spending to $250 billion this fiscal year, despite Congress's refusal to give him the budget ceiling he sought.

In a statement issued as he arrived for an afternoon and evening of campaigning in the Republican strongholds of Westchester County and Long Island, the President said his vetoes and other actions would mean that "we will not have a new wave of crippling inflation and there will be no need for higher taxes."

The President was sharply critical of the Democratic-controlled 92d Congress, which ad-journed last week, for its refusal to give him a free hand to trim nding. The President referred to the lawmakers as "big spend-ers" and said their actions, if not opposed by him, would produce higher prices and higher

"Back on my desk in Weshington, there are more than one hundred pieces of public legislation, which Congress jammed through at the same time it was rejecting my spending ceiling,"

"Many of them will serve the public interest, but I am also persuaded that some of them call for spending far in excess of what we can afford. These oudget-breakers could only be financed by higher prices or by higher.

Vetoes Promised

"During the coming week, there will be a number of vetoes," he said. "If there are big spending bills which I must sign for policy reasons, I also promise to exercise my full legal powers to hold down these appropriations, or re-duce others, to make room for the new programs." Administration officials estimated that Congress has appro-priated about $258 billion for the fiscal year that ends June 30. To keep within his self-imposed celling, Mr. Nixon would thus have to trim $8 billion through vetoes by impounding funds.

Censorship Tie Laid to Watergate Figure

By Robert Woodward and Carl Bernstein

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (WP).

Rep. William S. Moorhead, D., Pa, said yesterday that he has uncovered a secret contingency plan for national censorship and that Watergate bugging defen-dant James W. McCord jr., took part in it as one of his military reserve functions.

Rep. Moorhead, chairman of the House Foreign Operations and Government Information Subcommittee, said that an investigation of Mr. McCord shows that he participated in the drafting of a "National Watchlist" as part of the censorship plan.

In a national emergency, Rep. Moorhead said the list would include "information the censors will look for as they open letters, monitor broadcasts and question 'Questionable' Individuals such as those collected during Army surveillance activi-ties, and also collect similar types of information about American citizens," Rep. Moorhead said in

In other developments: Newsweek magazine said that Indians deputy state Re-publican chairman Charles Szih-lik, 24, was recruited as a Nixon undercover operative to help promote Sen. George McGovern's nomination, by Donald R. Seg-retti, who federal sources say was hired by the White House to engage in sabotage and spying activities against the Democrats Newsweek quoted Mr. Szihlik as telling friends that the object of the Nixon forces' sabotage campaign was "to swing the convention to McGovern . . . to literally destroy strong candidates like Muskie."

In Washington, federal investigative sources confirmed Newsweek's accounts of Mr. Szihlik's activities, and identified him as one of more than 50 undercover operatives paid for spying-andsabotage work against the Democrats by funds from the Com-mittee for the Re-Election of the

• Time magazine said that Jeb Stuart Magruder, one of two deputy directors of the President's re-election committee, "played a key role in the Watergate case" by authorizing the withdrawal of secret funds for political intelligence gathering, even though he may have approved the expenditure without knowing about the Watergate bugging.

The censorship plan on which Mr. McCord was said to be working is being prepared by a special rillitary reserve unit of (for censorship) and, as subcomthe Office of Emergency Preparedness, according to Rep.

Mr. McCord, a former agent for the FBL CIA and former security chief for President Nixon's reelection committee, was a member of the military unit as a reserve lieutenant colonel in the Air Force untl he resigned in February.

Mr. McCord was one of five men arrested June 17 in the Watergate bugging incident. He has stoce been indicted on charges of conspiring to eavesdrop on Democratic national headquarters. The Associated Press reported that the Office of Emergency

Preparedness said that the special reserve unit's duties were to pre-

BRUSSELS (NYT).—The dedication hy a Flemish veterans' group of a park in the north Belgian town of Stekene to their comrades who fell fighting the Russians in World War II has touched off a round of recriminations in this culturally divided country.

The owner of the memorial park is the St. Martin's Fund, which was founded in 1953 and has branches in most Flemish cities. EEC Parley To Mansholt

Concept of '80 Union Is Called Ambiguous

BRUSSELS, Oct. 23 (IRT).-Sicco Mansholt, president of the Executive Commission of the European Economic Community, said today that if the results of last week's summit meeting in Paris were examined for concrete decisions there would inevitably be disappointment.

But he said a more optimistic view could be taken if it was accepted that "the door had been opened" to the possibility of major policy developments.

At a news conference, Mr. Mansholt added that the "European union" that the REC leaders plan to establish by 1980 could mean all things to all men. "It could signify much or it could signify little," he said.

He also expressed disappointment that no firm undertaking for aid to developing countries had emerged from the meeting of nine EEC members and future members. The opportunity for Common Market countries to de-fine a position in relation to the developing world was missed, Mr. Mansholt said.

Clear Disappointment

He was also clearly disappointed by what he regards as the leaders' failure to come to grips with questions of social policy and the strengthening of the European Parliament, which would give some semblance of democracy to REC decision-

He was also critical of the fact that, although the leaders of the nine countries had agreed that more should be done to make the Common Market attractive to the younger generation, there was nothing about this in the final

"The EEC is a monster with many heads," Mr. Mansholt sald. "It is very difficult to explain clearly to people what it is in-tended to achieve."

He made frequent references to the "next summit," which, he said, would attempt to consolidate and improve the work achieved in Paris, The next meeting, he predicted, would be mainly concerned with political matters and the status of all Common Market institutions in relation to one another-a clear reference to strengthening the European Parliament.

today accused opposition leader Harold Wilson of being sour about the success of last week's Common Market summit meeting in Paris.

During sharp parliamentary exchanges today, Mr. Wilson closely questioned Mr. Heath about the proposed establishment by the community of a regional development fund before the end of 1973, a decision widely welcomed here as of potential benefit to Britain's poorer areas.

The Labor chief repeatedly pressed Mr. Heath to state how much Britain would gain from this fund and asked whether it would match what already had beer conceded to what he referred to as "the European agricultural welfare state."

Mr. Heath said that there was no single arrangement in the community which says that each country was going to receive back the amount of revenue that it contributed. "It is only because you are so sour at any sort of success that you display this con-temptible attitude today," Mr. Reath said

Wilson 'Surprised' Mr. Wilson also had expressed surprise that Mr. Heath did not intend to broadcast to the nation about the conference "because you

U.S. Criminals Use Fake Papers To Get Passports

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—Organized criminals are selling forged documents such as drivers licenses and Army discharge papers to help other criminals obtain American pass-ports, according to Senate testi-

Frances Knight, director of the Passport Office, said that more than 25,000 passports reported stolen or lost over the past three years have found their way into illicit channels, especially drug trafficking. She told the Internal Security Committee last week that unless tough action taken to stem the misuse of passports, the problem would soon become unmanageable, Organized crime, Miss Enight said, sells New York drivers licenses for $20, Army discharge cards for $50 and Social Security cards at $15.

U.S. passports were sought as the most acceptable travel document available because Americans can have any kind of foreign arousing suspicion, she added.

The Other Choices

The resignation of Michael Harrington as chairman of the Socialist party-Democratic Socialist Federation points up one of the most extraordinary features of the current presidential campaign. Mr. Harrington, who is perhaps the hest known and most respected of Socialists in the American tradition of that party, resigned because "the historic party of Eugene Victor Debs and Norman Thomas is today doing the work of Richard Nixon." He wants the Socialists to support Sen. McGovern in more than "the most formal sense." In other words, he wants the Socialists to do the work of the Democratic party, which is just what they rejused to do in the days of Gene Debs and Norman Thomas.

The lack of a clear Socialist position on this election is only one aspect of the demoralized state of nonmajor parties in this election. The American party, which traces its origins to the various groupings of rebeilious Southerners who were real factors in past campaigns, has lost Gov. Wallace, and found no successor. The Conservative party. an offshoot of the friction between liheral and conservative Republicans, has made little impression on the national scene, aithough it may have some local effects. Dr. Spock, who might be called the inheritor of Henry Wallace's progressivism, is a voice crying out in the wilderness, and the ambivalent Socialists, who, in Norman Thomas's days provided a respectably intellectual lightning rod for many who disliked the of Democratic inclinations.

It is hard to recall that in the 1932 election. when President Hoover's record of failure and Franklin D. Roosevelt's connection with Tammany, and with conservative Democrats in California, offered little hope to the radicals born of the depression, Norman Thomas received a strong vote. If Hoover had won (not a very likely supposition), Norman Thomas might have received the credit or horne the onus. Today, those who mistrust Mr. Nixon's integrity and Mr. Mc-Govern's ability might have voted for Norman Thomas—or for Michael Harrington. As matters stand, such a vote might not have affected the outcome-hut it would have offered a release for frustrations.

Such relief is not presently available. The voter will have to choose hetween the major candidates-or abstain. The fringe partles are simply that, with little to offer in the way of emotional or intellectual escape from

How acote that dilemma is may he seen in the vote of the Socialist National Committee-13 to 10 for a highly qualified endorsement of the South Dakota senator. If that is the predicament of the Socialists, with a history and a creed to give some fixed direction, and an inherent hias for whatever is Icft of the new politics in the McGovern campaign, it is easy to imagine the problem of many intelligent independents, even those

McGovern's World View

Of all the myths generated in this election campaign, one of the most deceptive and groundless is the notion that Sen. McGovern would try to lead the nation back into isolationism-as if such a thing were possible in the world of jet travel, satellite communications, international commerce and ICBMs. Nothing in the McGovern campaign record conveys any sense that the United States should or could retreat from the position of world leadership which it has held during the greater part of three decades.

What is in the campaign record is a vision of a progressive American role for the world of the 1970s. "We have long since met the demands of a world dominated by military concerns," Mr. McGovern argues. "But we are rapidly losing the world in which economic power and relations will have their day." Rejecting the traditional view espoused hy President Nixon that military strength is the embodiment of American influence, Mr. McGovern understands that national military power has reached the any force reduction in Europe in close underpoint of diminishing return. He sees no further virtue in propping up the jerrybuilt eystem of alliances and expedient executive agreements that once seemed necessary to contain the Soviet threat.

Sen. McGovern would end reliance on military ald as a means of spreading the American message, for euch aid has become increasingly a weapon by which unrepresentative governments protect themselves from their own people. The McGovern 'new fnternationalism" would greatly expand technical and economic aid targeted more directly to the benefit of peoples rather than

Underlying this foreign policy is an assumption that is admittedly not yet fully proven; Mr. McGovern is as aware of this risk as his critics, here and abroad. The assumption awaiting a test is that this country's two main adversaries, the Soviet Union and China, also eee their own interests in promoting a detente for the decade to come. This assumption is not dreamy wishful thinking hut derives from the actual behavior of the two Communist superpowers in the last two years or so, evidenced by their relative restraint in Vietnam and the Middle East; Peking's visible new posture toward former enemies; Moscow's apparent, though reluctant, need to rely on bread from the capitalist West to feed its own citizens; and the Kremlin's eagerness to enter upon a far-reaching trade agreement with the United States.

On this assumption, withdrawal from Vietnam is not analogous to the misguided appeasement of Munich; it only removes the most pressing irritant to a global relaxation of tensions. Formal recognition of the People's Republic of China, proposed by Sen. McGovern, would be only a modest concession for the opportunities presented.

Mr. McGovern has promised to arrange standing with America's NATO allies. Thus, he does not imply a weakening of the firm American engagement in Europe and the Middle East, as long as the assumption may still he wrong, and the American steps toward detente may not he reciprocated

The greatest threat to America's status as a first-rate power comes not from the halt in the arms race urged by Sen. McGovern, but from this country's military overextension, the lingering belief that American responsibilities somehow include patrolling the world by force of arms.

President Nixon has entered the era of negotiations, but continues to follow a policy of nationalism and military power. In our judgment, Sen. McGovern is ready to lead this country into a genuine era of detente and help it to flourish.

of martial law in South Korea strikes another embarrassing blow at the moral underpinning of U.S. policy in Asia.

Forty-three thousand American troops, backed by vast economic and military aid. still stand guard at this free-world frontier. Now the bastions of freedom have been breached, not by an external aggressor but hy the very leader who was entrusted with preserving at least the semblance of free institutions on the Korean peninsula.

President Park's explanation of his largest relapse into martial rule—the third in 11 years-is not persuasive. He eaid the concentration of power in Seoul is necessary to cope with "the rapidly changing international structure around us" and to carry on negotiations with North Korea on peaceful reunification.

But the new spirit of detenic in Asia, including Scoul's beginning dialogue with Pyongyang, reduces the external threat to President Chung Hee Park's proclamation South Korea. In any case, President Park already enjoyed extraordinary powers under the state of emergency declared last Decemher, to say nothing of the commanding majority his administration held in the now-dissolved National Assembly. The martial-law gambit has all the earmarks of a bid by the president to consolfdate and perpetuate his power indefinitely. In this, it bears disturbing resemblance to a parallel action by President Ferdinand E. Marcos in the Philippines last month and to similar suppressions of liberty hy other U.S. allies in Vietnam and Cambodia.

Washington has heen quick to voice its disapproval of the Korean crackdown, a refreshing change from past patterns of acquiescence to tyranny in American client states. This expression of dissent may well signal a welcome shift to a policy more consistent with this country's fundamental commitment to freedom.

LONDON—The importance of Russia as a market for agricultural machinery is shown in the last British Consular report from St. Petersburg says the Times. The imports to Russia are rapidly increasing, and amount now to 609,000 poulids per annum, of which Great Britain and Germany send nearly a third each; but the Russian imports from Germany are increasing, while these from Great Britain show a tendency to decline.

Hankypankied Hunt for Italian Terrorist

By Claire Sterling

ROME-Of all Italy's bombtbrowers-and there are enough to rip off a homb a day or more—the only one who has really rocked the establishment is the man who blew up a crowded Milan bank in December, 1969, killing 16 people. Nobody is sure who he is to this day, but that almost doesn't matter any more. It is not so much what some "red" or "black" terrorist did three years ago as what the police and courts have done since that is turning into Italy's worst political scandal since the war.

From the start, the hunt for this particular bomb-thrower has seemed distinctly odd. How odd it was in fact may be gathered from the indictment last weekend of the nation's assistant chief of police and two high-ranking notice commissioners for suppressing evidence. One of these three had also been warned previously of possible indictment for the illegal arrest of the first suspect in the case, an anarchist rallway-man named Gluseppe Pinelli, Pulled in 48 hours after the bombing, Pinelli was reported officially to have jumped out of a window while under questioning at police headquarters, as an act of penance. How the seven policemen who were there when he jumped could bave failed to stop him was only one of the interesting questions that finally led to exhumation of his body and re-opening of the investiga-

Another interesting question anarchist ballet dancer named Pietro Valpreda, could have left his Roman home, planted the bomb in Milan and returned to Rome without the knowledge of the police spy customarily glued to his side. Held on the fragile testimony of a single witness now dead, whose testimony has been ruled out by the constitutional court anyway, Valpreda has been in jail awaiting trial for 34 months. Last spring, his trial actually got under way, not at the scene of the crime in Milan but in Rome, Before long, though, the trial was called off so that Valpreds could be tried in Milan after all. Last week, Milan's Court of Cassation decided that he must not be tried in Milan, lest undue pressure be exerted by that city's noisy left-ists. It therefore ruled that the trial should be held 1,200 kilometers south of Milan and 600 kilometers south of Rome, in Catanzaro. The regional capital of Calabria, Catanzaro not only has no adequate hospital facilities for Valpreda, who suffers from Burger'e disease, or any jall except a small one for minors, or a courthouse of any kind since the last one fell down two years ago: It also happens to have quite a lot of noisy rightists, while the outlying region has been on and off the edge of civil war for years.

Meanwhile, two other Italians having no known or imaginable connection with Valureds have been arrested for the same bombing. The two, Giovanni Ventura of Treviso and Franco Freds of Padua, belong to a "black" underground terrorist group well to the right of Italy's nec-Fascist party; and the evidence against them so far is incomparably stronger than any dug up against the Milan bank bomb was Freds's: the explosive used was the same kind found in quantity at his underground group's headquar-ters; the briefcase holding the bomb had been bought in his hometown of Padua, along with three others for the same purpose, just two days before the bomb was planted.

Over and Out?

Although Ventura and Freda were arrested five mooths ago, the anarchist Valpreda did not get out of fail simply because they came in. On the contrary, there is talk in the Ministry of Justice now of combining the two trials in Catanzaro. Preparations for that are likely to take at least another year (although the Minister of Justice, Guido Gonella, says an improvised courtbouse can be whipped up in three months). By then Valpreds will have been in prison without trial being the maximum set by lawhe will presumably be sprung. What sticks in the craw shout this story is not just that any Italian can be kept in jail so long without trial—especially an Italian who would almost certainly be acquitted if he could ever get as far as the courtroom-but that so much remarkable hankypanky can go on in high places tending to keep him there. In-formation coming to light only now reveals that vital evidence compromising Freds and Ventura got "lost" three years ago. The string tied to the damning briefcase, which could have led police in a beeline to its place of purchase, simply disappeared. The report of the Padus shop clerk who actually sold the four briefcases, and told the local police so three days after the bombing, was somehow mislaid without ever ining magistrate. Results of a chemical analysis by the German manufacturers of the brisicase, settling a crucial question about its color, were never passed on to the magistrate either. Furthermore, the office which failed to pass on that possibly decisive evidence was the confidential affairs office of Italy's Ministry of the Interior.

While there is naturally a good deal of "don't worry, we can ex-plain everything" going on, the average Italian is getting deeply explical about any comforting explanation. The uncomfortable explanation most rapidly gaining ground is the one touted by "red" extremists all along: That the Milan bank bomb was part of a neo-Fascist plot to spread disorder and panic, blame ft on the leftists, and thereupon ride to power with a military junta like the Greek colonels; that the Greek colonels have in fact been in on the plot from the first; and that at least some Italians in high places agree sufficiently to nip off with a bit of paper here and string there-or did, until all this blew up in their faces during the past week or so.

It is only fair to add that some of Italy's extreme leftists are no less capable of the same dark designs on the extreme rightists. More important by far, though, is the fact that all this did blow up, with the help of Italians in high places in no way disposed to sit back and let a bunch of colonels take over.

Of course, that may not get Valoreda out of Jail a day sooner. Nevertheless, it reminds those of us who tend to a doomsday view of Italian politics that today, as yesterday, a year ago, 10 years ago, things are literally not as black as they may seem.

Is There No Decency?

By Anthony Lewis

WASHINGTON, - One of the highest-ranking American prisoners in North Vietnam is James Mulligan, a Navy captain who was shot down over Vinh nn March 20, 1966. His wife, Louise, has waited for six and one-half years now with astonishing strength, wisdom and even humor. As many government of-Ilcials have learned, she is a rare person, so courageous and so ashamed of one's own petty getting to the desk of the exam-

Louise Mulligan was in the audience at the Statler Hotel here last week when President Nixon spoke to the families of prisoners and men missing in Southeast Asia. Most of the audience rose and applauded when he finished but she stayed seated and silent. She saw no reason, as she put it, to appland a man who had cohtinued this terrible war for four more years.

After the President's speech, Mrs. Mulligan went out of the hallroom to telephone a friend. When she finished, she noticed man watching her—the only other person in the hall. He was carrying a walkie-talkie with a receiver button in his ear, like the Secret Service men who seconipany the President. As she waiked out, she heard him say into the sending unit, "She is now leaving the hall . ."

Mrs. Mulligan told some of the other wives about her experience. saying how ironic she thought it was that we were supposed to be fighting for democracy in South Vietnam and then found things like this happening at home. Two of her friends later saw the man who had followed her, and went up and asked who he was. He replied that he was & postal in-

What was done to Louise Mulligan is about par for the course in official Washington today-par for political decency and for candor. Visiting Washington these days is a depressing business. Even disagreement with President Nixon's policies cannot prepare one for the atmosphere of this city: It is ugly. It is shameless. The President's appointments secretary is accused of helping to arrange a program of nasty sabotage directed at the Democratic party. Newspapers and magazines produce evidence tying him to one alleged saboteur in particular. The public might be thought entitled to a full statement of facts -an inquiry or a detailed, categorical denial of the charges. But no. The White House press secretary, Ronald Ziegler, refuses through a long briefing to comment on the substance of the charges. He says the White House will pay no attention to "hearsay" or evidence from unidentified sources. In other words, it will not even look into charges against the man who guards the door of the President of the United States unless they are proven as they would have to be in a court of law. If that standard applied, virtually no government corruption would ever be officially investigated.

Tone Setter

There are too many sawdust men in Washington now, men with nothing inside—no limits of character to what they will do for political ends. If it works, if you can get away with it, do it: That is the only standard.

Of course it is the President principle or mere political advantage. The standards of this Motivation?

In times of war or other national emergency, Americans have historically ceded to the President wide and extraordinary powers. Conversely, in times of peace, presidential power has languished at the expense of a strong Congress.

It follows that, if the Vietnam war is concluded soon, Richard Nixon will stand to lose much of the power he now exercises in the name of "national security It is thus my prediction that American military action in Southeast Asia will continue for at least "four more years", the disgusting and sustained loss of life and material notwithstand-

Danish Cook Steals Trawler. Heads for North Sea and Storm

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Oct. 23 (AP).-A sea cook stole a Danish trawler here last night and was missing in a North Sea gale today after being chased by his angry skipper in another vessel.

The cook, Jorgen Christiansen, 28, was last seen at the helm of the 122-ton Nordkap weaving erratically in rough eeas whipped by 60-mile-an-hour winds.

The Nordkap's skipper, Borge Jacobsen, 27, said later that the cook-who joined the crew last week-had no navigational or engineering experience and could now be "drifting helplessly" east of Aberdeen.

"I fear the worst. He doesn't know what he's doing. He has little chance of getting home," Mr. Jacobsen said of his cook.

Mr. Christiansen took over the Nordkap late last night "for no apparent reason." He yelled to astounded watchers on the dock that he was heading home to Ejsberg, Denmark, 400 miles east.

The Slip Mr. Jacobsen and the Nordkap's two other crewmen leaped aboard another trawler with two police officers and gave chase. But the cook gave them the slip in the darkness after sideswiping an oil

The New Museums of Texas-Testing Ground for Ideas

NEW YORK-Texas, somebody down there said to me the other day, has become one great big museum. It was typical Teras-type hyperbole, but not without point, Hundreds of critics, museum directors, collectors, patrons, dealers had gathered from all over the country and even Europe, to move in a cham-pagne-fuelled pilgrimage to the openings of new museums in Fort Worth, Corpus Christi, Houston. I went on as far as Amarillo: no opening party there, but the completion of an Edward Stone designed museum in the Texas Panhandie, even n couple of months ago, is still an event Actually architecture was the main event in each of the museums, and one of the reasons the Texas phenomenon is of singular importance to the whole country. Free of normal commercial pressures in the designing of museums, distinguished archi-tects have been making them a testing-ground for new and experimental ideas that must surely have application to other buildings as well. They have special significance in this time when funds for the building of cultural facilities, not to mention the art they are to contain, grow increasingly hard to raise. The country is carefully watching, the i, to see not only what programs are being devised to enable the new facilities to perform public service justifying their great cost, but what forms top sychitects have come up with to promote these programs as well as to function as beautiful objects on their own, enhancing the art they present.

As a radically new form, then, and an exceedingly effective one, the Kimbell Art Museum in Fort Worth, designed by Louis I, Kahn and tuilt at a cost of $6.5 million, must unquestionably take top place, not only among the new Texas structures but among sll recently completed museums anywhere in the country.

Kahn, one of the most esteemed (although to the general public least publicized) architects in the country, has never before built a museum. Working closely with Richard F. Brown, Fort Worth's director, he designed a series of galleries topped by semi-circular, barrel-like roofs described by the architect as concrete, cycloid vaults, although what they may first bring to some viewers' minds

The center of each long vault-ed ceiling is split down the middle with a three-foot opening to admit natural light which is diffused by metal mirrored filters punched through with holes spaced by computer-reckoning to permit variations of light during the day. The process is far too difficult for me not only to describe but to understand. No matter. It makes for a warm, glowing, intimate setting further enhanced by gallery walls of travertine, finely textured wood, even stainless steel superbly finished to the soft luster of pewter. Within the galleries are casual groupings of comfortable furniture on Oriental rugs, Never has a museum as spectacular and as innovative as this, and as monumental in its space, yielded a sting more directly and sympathetically scaled to the physical dimensions and absorptive capac-ities of human beings.

And yet . . . while recognizing, applauding saluting without reservation the building's extraordinary virtues, the galleries themselves left me wanting. It is a response so idiosyncratic that it is, perhaps, unfair to mention. The fact is nevertheless, that I respond to a museum setting which is less intimate, and more exalting. I look for grandeur, not informality. I want my first entrance to a museum to take me out of my everyday world to another, where my spirits will not reiax but he sent soaring. It is, of course, why Frank Lloyd Wright's Guggenheim Museum still remains my favorite.

Admittedly, the Guggenheim offers competition to all bot the very best works. The Fort Worth museum, on the contrary, holds out exceptional hospitality. And that worried me a bit too. It is, of course, a job of inestimable difficulty rounding up a topgrade collection quickly And the Kimbell Art Foundation, beneficiary of the estate of Kay Kimbell, a tycoon in oils, foods and other industries, owned, when he died in 1964, many works of less than top quality.

Gradually Mr. Brown is replacing these, and already he has made some extraordinary acquisitions. Among them is a superb saries of 12th-century frescoes removed from a chapel near Avignon, transferred to canvas. mounted on wood panels, and reconstructed in a separate freestanding structure simulating the apse for which they were originally painted. Another singular acquisition is a 13th-century English work known as the Barnarbas Altarpiece, combining marvelous power and sweetness, an described by scholars as possibly being the earliest surviving English panel painting anywhere.

Again I say no matter. The Kimbell Foundation has endless resources. If the Metropolitan and other major museums contime to liquidate major works in the interests of new acquisitions or expansion, the Fort Worth museum will have little trouble filling in its still considerable Philip Johnson designed a second of the new museums, that at Corpus Christi. This one had to be speciacular, being Johnson's. It is a relatively small building, 12,000 square foot white box sitting on the edge of the Gulf of Mexico (the Kahn complex occupies 120,000 square feet). It is jewel-case (cost $1.3 million)but without Jewels.

What is inside first, then, since it is most easily disposed of? The building contains three main exhibition areas, two of them relatively small, the third a large soaring two-and-a-half stories high, magnificently lit by daylight pouring in through sky-lights and two great windows (same 10 by 12 feet) which, opening on the gulf, suggest the calm pictures of Tanguy or Magritte. What is hung now in that beautiful major space is a flock of Andy Warhol's familiar flowers, seemingly identical although small differences are perceptible on careful although unrewarding examination, along with his wallsilk-screen-on-cenvas portraits of his friends and patrons. The result is as satisfying as a bulletin board of blown-up cut-outs from a fashion magazine a couple of seasons old. They have not understood yet, in Corpus Christi, that if your aim is to be fashionable rather than fine, you had better get with it. Warhol is already dějá vu.

The two smaller galleries are currently fixed, respectively, with an exhibition of Jasper John's constructions, and some of Frank Stella's recent paintings, with the space given to Stella, on the building's second level and reached by a spectacular 60-foot walkway overlooking the great hall, much the more satisfactory. But it is the stunning building itself which is the thing here. And that leaves me, in balance (or, rather, because there is no balance), more disappointed than at Fort Worth, Johnson himself puckishly calls his building a marshmallow. What it really is, is a great, complex cubist sculp-

The purpose of the Corpus Christi museum, says Catherina S. Gallender, its director, is not to assemble a permanent collec-tion but rather to bring new art to the city and create a dramatio and aesthetically exciting structure. It is a legitimate purpose But it would be a great pity if, even within the limitations imposed by available loan exhibitions and the brouhaba mevitably engendered by avant-garde shows. the museum did not attempt to bring in material with more substance, with educational as well as entertainment potential Surely it is of first importance for the people of Corpus Christi. icolated from the cultural centers of Texas, to understand that art can be more than fun and games, or, in effect, a brightly colored neon sign reading "We are here." Their answer might be "So what, if that's all there is?" Because there is a lot more. And Philip Johnson's beautiful little building, for all its nwn concentrated strength, can show it off superbly.

In Houston the big news is the opening of the Contemporary Arts Museum, a sharply angled, metal parallelogram of a structure that sits directly across the street from the wing the great ploneer, Mies van der Rohe, designed for Houston's Museum of Fine Arts some years ago. It makes Mes look old-fashioned—but wonderful. Actually Mies'e structure never did work very well. Its interior space was too big to handle almost anything other than gigantic works. It is being expanded now in n sweeping curve of glass wall and interior changes that must prove much more practical. The new Contemporary Aris structure looks promising from the outside; inside it is a warehouse, a "minimal metal-block sculpture," says architect Gunnar Birkerts, that in truth, suggests minimal use and merit. -The Museum of Fine Arts has a loan exhibition on view for a year of masterpieces from Norton Simon'e collection: just some Rembrandts, Zurburans and the like. .

That leaves Amazillo still un-accounted for Well, it is not a sensational building that Stoneof Washington's Kennedy Cultural Center-has done this time, but a simple, useful, modest and exed as part of the Amarillo College complex, and as a regional art center for that remote northwest corner of Texas. Its director, Thomas Matthews, has great plans for it. Something of his forthrightness can be gathered from his recent show of the revered (especially in the West) and immensely expensive cowboy pointings and sculpture of Frederick Remington and Charlce Russell, in which be labelled them. heretically as the sentimental romantic-realist illustratore they were. I gather Texans took another, longer look—and marbe at last agreed. Anyway, the build-ing is still standing.

PARIS FASHIONS

A British Designer Stars During Ready-to-Wear Wee

By Hebe Dorsev

PARIS, Oct. 28 (IET). Anybody who has been wondering the dress business had anywhere to go should take an at Jean Muir's collection. This British designer is doing with dress what Mary Quant once did with the mini skirt. Rebecoming a world influence. Her group of 30 or so dresses shown this morning as of a French ready-to-wear week drew heavy applause from and buyers. Miss Muir builds her soft silk jersey dresses a a tiny yoke and a high faset belt.

Then she plays around with sleeves which vary from wide butterflies to full flormoss that fold around into a small cape. Her proportions are so right that the skirt lengths, which vary from above the knee to midankle, are of no consequence.

Her pink and pale gray groups were the most effective. Since these are summer fashions, Miss Muir siso added printed crepe de chine. She nodated the whole dress look by having the girls wear dark busiery and high-heel-

The other star today was Karl Lagerfeld, with the Chlor col-lection, Mr. Lagerfeld used the shirt theme all the way through and put it across with crepe de chine, which made the whole collection as light as a whisper. Shantong Coats

In a deluxe sportswear approach, Lagericki cut a number of ivory silk shantung coats along trench-coat lines. He did not ignore pants but made them soft, wide, loose and usually in a tweed-print silk.

Mid-ankle pleated silk skirts were worn with a tucked-in silk shirt and a silk overblouse or else a short evening sweater. Another alternative was the long, printed skirt with n black bra.

Prints are always strong at Chloe's, but this time the hit pattern is sure to be the multicolored shells. Despite the loose and easy look of the collection, Lagerfeld is going back to the fit. He had a few significant numbers in which the jacket, worn over a plested skirt, came close to resembling an hour giass.

Meanwhile, the French readyto-wear salon-the stars show on their own premises-keeps growing and growing. The 24th one, which opened last week at tho Porte de Versalles, has 820 exhibitors, compared to 800 last season.

The two floors (56,000 square meters) are filled to capacity. With a "we just can't knock down the walls" shrug, a French official said that 60 would-be

The bar All-Baba is the kind of high note that particularly pleases Ferrie: No housewife would tackle it. In fact, as he points out, most housewives don't like to handle flah at all.

For this dish which is good enough to make a reputation, a sea bass is completely skinned and boned. This is another Ferrie principle. A restaurant client should never be faced with the annoyance of a fish bone.

Into the cavity goes a mousse of pike, trout, salmon and cream. It is rich and delectable yet deceptively light, for Ferrie refuses to use flour Presentation is the art of haute cuisine. The

There were shortfalls, however. in some industries that the party leadership had promised would show the way into the consumer era. These included shoes, tex-tiles, clothing, radios, televisions and washing machines.
While industry on the whola has fulfilled its plan in the first nine months," Pravda said, "many enterprises still do not completely use available reserves for further mcreases in production.

"There are shortcomings in the use of productive capacities, work time and raw materials," the newspaper said in a review of the economic performance.
In addition, it complained that "not everywhere is production output assured in the required assortment and quality."

Among the items in short supply is "technological equipment for light industry"-which means that automation of industry is lagging, Pravda said. Great Leap Fails

The great leap forward in consumer goods, promised by party leader Leonid L. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin when the five-year plan was announced last year, was to be based on increased automation of light industry. The shortage in this area is an admission that the breakthrough is failing. Among the items mentioned, several not only failed to meet the goals of the plan but fell short of last year's output.

Fewer shoes, television sets and washing machines were produced in the first nine months of this year than in the comparable period last year. A possible indication of trouble in gathering next year's crop was the fact that 5 percent fewer harvesting combines were turned out this year than last. Shortage of machinery has been a source of complaint in the fields.

Bank Merger Called Off

Wells Fargo Bank of San Francisco has terminated its agreement to buy the $1.25 billion First Western Bank & Trust Co. of Los Angeles from World Airways for $95 million in cash and notes The plan had been under anti-trust attack by the Justice Department, and its cancellation had long been considered to be a foregone conclusion by banking analysts. A key factor in the failure of the negotiations, according to sources close to the banks, was the political criticism this year of the Justice Department's agreement to settle its anti-trust case against International Telephone & Telegraph-which reportedly made department attorneys unwilling to consider a compromise that the two banks could accept as reasonable.

One aspect of rapidly escalating profits that has puzzled some observers is why carnings are allowed to jump so high when wages must be held to a relatively modest 5.5 percent increase, when price increases are supposed to average only 2.5 percent annually, and when dividends are held to a voluntary 4 percent growth rate.

U.S. Deficit In Payments Seen Wider

Bank Expects Quarter Gap of $4.75 Billion

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (Reuters). -The U.S. balance-of-payments deficit for the third quarter is estimated at $4.75 hillion by economists at Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

The figure, which does not reflect adjustment for seasonal factors, compares with the deficit of $700 million recorded in the second quarter. The bank's publication, World

Financial Markets, says virtually the whole third-quarter deficit came in July, "when there were massive abort-term capital out-flows" following Britain's decision to float the pound. Since the middle of August, it adds, some of the outflow has been reversed. Morgan's estimate brings the official-settlements deficit—which measures the dollars held by official foreign institutions—for nine months to about $8.25 mil-of short-term capital about balanced for the period. For 1972 as a whole, the bank anticipates a deficit in the "basic" balance-comprising trade, tourism and long-term capital flows lion, with inflows and outflows

-of over $10 billion. Morgan said it sees the trade position continuing a "moderate" improvement that began in May, and exports for the remainder of 1972 may be expanded by stepped-up exports of agricultural commodities — particularly ship-ments to the Soviet Union.

Market Rises Sharply As Peace Hopes Grow

By Vartanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (NYT).- The blue-chip Dow finished at New York Stock Exchange prices 951.31 with a gain of 3.50. rallied strongly again today as rumors of a cease-fire in Indochina continued. Glamour issues once again scored the best gains. Prices opened with a rush and reached their highest level at 11 a.m., when the Dow Jones industrials ran ahead more than Prices edged downward during the rest of the session, while hopes for peace continued to run high.

U.S. Controls Seen Staying

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Oct. 23 (AP-DJ).—Leaders of the largest U.S. corporations expect wageprice controls to be a factor in the economy long after the current control law expires April 30. Executives who gathered here over the weekend for the antumn meeting of the elite Business Council generally wanted the controls ended; but many favored and expected to see enacted a system of more relaxed controls, rhaps focusing on certain inflation-prone industries, such as construction. Others, who believed that "inflationary psychology" still is a powerful force in the economy, strongly advocated continuing the controls.

Among the highlights of the semiannual meeting were: • A pledge from a delegation of top administration officials that the President is determined to avoid a tax increase by holding down spending through a combination of bill vetoes and a decision to impound congressionally appropriated funds. . · An opinion by economic consultants to the council that they expect the "current strength in business to continue" well into 1973, with some slowdown possible toward the end of next year.

· A statement by Price Commission chairman C. Jackson Grayson jr. that the panel is mepping control plant for 1973, although Donald Rumsfeld, directer of the Cost of Living Council, said Mr. Nixon has not decided the future of the stabilization

It was a market where traders, figuratively speaking, kept looking toward Vietnam amid expectations that progress is being made on a cease-fire. Rumors and conjecture were rampant in the absence of any official pronouncements of

The market, in a sense, picked up where it left off on Friday. when the Dow rose 10.69 fueled by an unconfirmed report that the United States and North Vietnam have virtually agreed on n ceasefire throughout Indochina on

Glamour stock benefited from a combination of broker recommendations, short-covering activity, new investment demand and the belief-in some quartersthat they will lead any real peace rally, at least on a short-term

Among the big boomers were Texas Instrument, up 7 18 to 174 1.2, and Polaroid, up 6 3.8 to 182. Providing an extra hurst to Polaroid was the expectation concerning the company's new SX-70 color camera slated for national marketing in 1973. Other gainers included Xerox. up 4 3.8 to 161 3 8; Disney, 3 1.4 to 186 1 4; Fairchild Camera, 3 to 50 1/2 on the active list; and Corning Glass Works, 3 1.4 to 242 3,4.

The market action of International Business Machines symbolized the growing confidence of investors. IBM moved up 3 1.2 to 390 1/2, helped by a number of buy recommendations from broker houses. Only one week earlier-when the Dow had ended some 30 points lower than today in a nervous Monday session-IBM plurmeted 14 1 2 amid a potential Justice Department threat to break up the company. Sony Corp. rose 1 1,4 to 44

7/8, while Matsushita Electric gained 1/2 to 22 1/4. Wheelsbrator-Frye rose 1 1 8 to 24 3/8. It reported higher third-quarter earnings. Prices advanced in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index rose 0.10 to 25.82, while advances topped declines, 580 against 309. Turnover was 3.23 million shares, compared with 3.36 million last Friday.

Innovative Atlanta builds a new kind of coliseum. The Omni, unique a large portion of Atlanta's business 16,500-seat multipurpose arena with platform access at street level, typifies Atlanta's utilization of air rights to develop major projects over central city railroad tracks. Since the turn of the century, a section of the city has been raised one level over the tracks to create acres of

"new" urban property that now represents community. The present-day surge of interest in air rights is sparking even more development as Atlanta continues to channel millions of dollars into downtown construction. Such ingenious land use contributes to the international stature of Atlanta, the world's next great city.

THE MASTER OF GO

By Yasunari Kawabata. Translated from Japanese by Sign G. Seidensticker. Alfred A. Knopf. 188 pp. $5.95.

Reviewed by Alan Friedman

THE Choss Match of the Cenchair and Boris Spassky's pride have been pulled to pieces and reassembled. But what if The Times, say, had presumed upon Viadimir Nabokov's well-known passion for chess and had per-suaded him to travel to Repkjavik to cover the match? And what if Nabokov had then given us a book, not only analyzing chess strategies, but dissecting with alltwo players themselves, together with their families, friends, m.magers, judges, lesser chess masters and lesser reporturs, while every-where viewing the event as a scene in the play of art and history?

"The Master of Go" is the improbable Oriental equivalent, mutatis mutandis, of that improbable book. Yasunari Kawabats, who received the Nobel Prize for literature in 1968, was considered until his recent death the master of Japanese letters. A novelist of a peculiarly pene-trating subtlety, he was also a lover of the game of Go. In 1938 the Tokyo Nichinichi Shim-bun asked him to attend the Go Match of the Century as a newspaper reporter. It was a classic match, a contest between two men and at the same time two cultures, between the Old Japan and a New one, between conservative tradition and dynamic ambition, between a polite, alling Master and a young Challenger, neurotic, fussy, complaining and unpredictable.

The game took months, and to help the reader follow it, The Master of Go" is well furnished with diagrams of the board, notes at the back of the book, and frequent analyses by Kawabata of the tides of battle. No doubt a good number of readers will up a club to West. At this point, West could only prevent a third-round club ruff by sacrificing his skim over such data as: "A space removed on the 'S' line from Black 87." Similar details of play are given in abundance, for this is a log of the match-or is it? Edward G. Seidensticker, whose translation flows elegantly, calls the work a "chronicle-novel" but "rather more chronicle than novel." A tad less particular, the dust jacket labels it simply "s novel." The reader who opens this book expecting a novel may be in for a surprise. Kawabata, loving Go as Nabokov loves chess, keeps one eye on the board. If the reader > however, he will be amazed. For Kawabata has two eyes. and everywhere his vision of the board makes him see more. The progress toward death, the unity of adversaries, the veils of pride and the shadows of enlightenment are never far from the foreground of the match. "It was a wholly unexpected play. I felt a tensing of my muscles, as if the diabolic side of the Master had suddenly been revealed," Or through his shoulders were quite regular. They were to me like a concentration of violence, or the doings of some mysterious power that had taken possession of the Master... I wondered if I was witness to the workings of the Master's soul as, all unconsciously, it received its inspiration, was host to the afflatus. Or was I watching a passage to en-

A key decision was made by Wuliams in the eighth imning when the Reds had Pete Rose on third and Joe Morgan on second with one out. The next batter was slugging catcher Johnny

"I broke a lifelong rule," said Williams. "I have always said that I would oever put the winning run on base. So here we were ahead in the eighth by 3-1. The Reds had two on and I put the winning run on-but I was determined Bench's bat wouldn't

"I'll tell you an odd thing." a dejected Bench said in the Cincinnati clubhouse, "I went to dinner Saturday night with Reg-gie Jackson [Oakland's hardhitting outfielder who was hurt in the playoffs and did not play in the Series]. I told Reggie: If the situation comes up where [Rollie] Fingers is pitching for the A's, it's going to be my turn. He got me twice and I owe him one. Sure enough, it happened in the eighth inning. As I was going to the plate I glanced into the Oakland dugout and there was Reggie smiling and sheking his head as if to say: 'You called it.' I called it, all right, but I didn't get a chance to hit."

Bench summed up the A's victory: "I think this is a higger disappointment for us then 1970 because this time we were sure the A's and their execution. They didn't make many mistakes. They are a very sound ball club and they didn't best themselves. They kept our front men off base for most of the Series and we couldn't execute our running game."

Gene Tenace, the obscure handyman of the A's, proved the hitting hero of the Series. The 26-year-old native of Ohio, once passed up by Cincinneti scouts when he was playing American Legion ball because "He'li never make it," won the Sport Magazine car as the most valuable player of the Series. Tenace, who hit four homers in the Series, kept his hero role with a single and double, in the last game, driving in two runs before he gave way to a pinch-runner in the him; "This is the first time anybody ever won the car and didn't go nine innings." Tenace batted an unspectacular 225 with five homers and 32 runs batted for the sesson. In the seven World Series games, he hit 348 with eight hits in 23 times at bet. He had four homers, one double and nine runs

"Tenace hit mistakes," observed Bench, who hastened to add: "I got a lot of mistakes to hit, too, and didn't hit them. What I mean is that when a batter hits a home run, it's generally on a mistake and rarely on a good pitch. By a -mistake, I mean a hanging curve or getting the ball out to the middle of the instead of inside or out-But I'm not taking any-away from Tenace. He the most of his opportunitles and we didn't."

"I wasn't worried about playing first base," said Tensce.
"After all, I was signed as a shortstop and I even pitched in the minors. There's no position I haven't played."

Fingers, who did another fine job of relief pitching, said that he had "a momentary terror" in' the ninth when Pete Rose lined to left field for the final out with Derrel Chancy on base. "I wasn't going to give Rose any breaking stuff," Fingers said. He handles that too well. I was determined to throw him nothing but fast balls, which I did. When the ball left the bat, I was praying Joe [Rudi] was in the valley. He was."

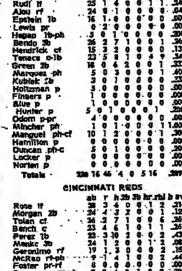

The A's apparently felt vindicated for having been taken so lightly by the Reds. "It an-noted me when I read that the major leaguers (the Reds) were playing the little leaguers [A's]". said Pingers. "I never like to rip anybody. They might wake up."

Then the controversial owner of the Oakland A's jumped up on top of the A's dugout, helped his wife up with him and waved his arms in jubilation over his team's World Series victory.

Several minutes later, he walked into the team's chibhouse, his shoulders alumped from nervous fatigue and his hoarse voice filled with sobs. The first player he saw was Gene Tenace the Series hero, and he embraced him warmly. Then several other players saw Finley and they began pouring California champagne over his balding head and his

Whether the players bathed him with champagne out of familial love or devilish dislike couldn't be determined. But both feelings toward their employerlove and hate-exist among the A'e because those are the widely divergent feelings Finley evokes.

Opposing Views People who have benefited from Finley's paternalistic generosity speak fandly of him I'He's the fairest man I've ever worked for in baseball," said Vern Hoscheit, an Oakland coach who's been in the game since 1941.] But those who aren't so fortunate or aren't willing to shide by Finley's way of life speak of him with invective ["Charlie has only one fault." Bob Elson, one of the team's former announcers, has said. "He doesn't treat people like human beings."

As a result of his brash, sometimes crude ways. Finley has been considered an outcast by his fellow owners ever since he purchased the club, which then was in Kansas City, in 1961.

Despite his critics, though, Finley took a foundering lastplace club, battled his way out of Kansas City to Oakland in 1968, and built an organization that today reigns as the No. 1 team in

The team is strictly a Finley family production. Finley himself owns 30 percent, his wife owns another 30 percent and their seven children (two daughters and five sons ranging in age from 14 to 30) own the remaining 40 percent.

Chean Labor

"They could outvote me anytime they want, but they'll never get anyone to work as cheaply as I do," says Finley, who takes no pay for his jobs as president, general manager and all-around dictator of everything that happens in the A's organization. There are many people who believe the 54-year-old Finley goes so far as to manage the club, but field manager, deny that sug-

"We discuss strategy," Williams concedes, "but I make out the line-up and I make the maneuvers on the field."

This much-maligned man, Charles Oscar Finley, was born Feb. 22, 1918, in Birmingham, Ala., Oscar and Burmah Finley. Young Charles followed his father into the steel mills The once played the infield for and managed a team in the Gary, Ind., Industrial Baseball Leaguel, but in 1946 he got into the insurance business and now heads his own successful Chicago company.

Goalie Banks Is Offered Eye

STOKE, England, Oct. 23 (Reuters).-An anonymous telephone caller today offered to donate one of his eyes to Gordon Banks, 34, the English national soccer goalkeeper who is threatened with loss of sight in his right eye following an automobile accident.

Banks, who was operated on here last night after splinters of windshield glass struck him in the eye, has "no more than a 50-50 chance" of retaining sight in the eye, according to surgeon at the nosti Doctors said it would be a week before they would know if the operation had been successful. Banks, who plays for Stoke City, was reported in "satisfactory" condition.

Finley, a resident of Laporte, Ind., purchased the baseball club and in more recent years added the California Golden Seels of the National Hockey League and the Memphis Tams of the American Basketball Association to his col-

Throughout his 12 years in baseball, Finley has made suggestions that he has contended would benefit the game, but he always has been ridiculed for them.

Nevertheless, some of the ideas, such as playing mid-week World Series games at night, have been

In their comments about Finley, his critics began calling him Charlie O. as a form of derision, but Finley eventually accepted the name as a term of endearment. "Charlie O." is written on the cuffs of his pinstriped shirts and he even gave that name to his mule, the team mascot. At times it appears that he is as fond of the mule as he is of the name.

But in victory yesterday, Finley refused to discuss his critics, declined to use the World Series championship as a platform from which he could have the last laugh on them.

"In my first two or three years in baseball, the barbs worried me, Finley said, occasionally interrupting his comments to seek out and douse players and writers with champagne. "But now I just read them and smile."

cism has come from baseball people who laughed at Finley for being his own general manager. The A's used to have general managers, but Finley got rid of them all and finally decided he could do the job as well as anyone. And surprisingly, he has.

Late Redskin Rally Topples Cowboys; Raiders Are Upset

By William N. Wallace

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (NYT). Brown, and Harraway ran away -Unsung Charlie Harraway scored the winning touchdown for Washington over Dallas yesterday, but Tom Landry, the Cowboy coach, sung the praises of Larry Brown, the Redskins' persistent star. Brown was a key man in almost every play except Harraway's 13-yard weakside end run in the final period, which gave Washington 1. 34-20

The Redskins, battling Dallas for first place in the Eastern Division of the National Conference, were behind for 42 minutes in this game. They were "fightin', hittin,' scrappin', stayin' in there," in the words of their coach, George Allen, and they emerged with victory plus a onegame lead over the Cowboys. The season will reach its halfway mark next week when Washington plays the Giants, now tied with Dallas for second in the division, and the Cowboys meet

"Larry Brown beat us." said Landry, Brown, the league's leading and hest ground gainer, ran 26 times for 95 yards and one touchdown. Furthermore, Sonny Jurgensen, the quarterback who played his usual impeccable game against Dallas, isolated Brown on the slower Cowboy linebackers. especially Chuck Howley, and it was no contest. Brown caught seven Jurgensen passes for 100 yards and one more couchdown. His scoring pass came when the Cowboys' safety, Cliff Harris, was blitzing Jurgensen-a dangerous thing to do-and there was no one deep to cover Brown, on a 19-yard play. That toss enabled Jurgensen to join John Unitas and John Brodle as the only pro quarterbacks to pass for more than 30,000 yards in a career.

Brown's later 34-yard touchdown run in the third quarter cut the Cowboy lead to 20-14, and gave the Redskins the idea could win the game, which had been almost all Dallas's up to that point Curt Knight added a 43-yard field goal making the score 20-17 as the last quarter began. Jurgensen then took his team 80 yards, with two key passes to

The 1st Dragoon. Regiment during a demonstration against the decision to drop. horse-mounted units.

Why the Swiss Kept the Cavalry

By William Tuchy

BERN-On a main street in Bern, next to a modern office building, is a military installation which might have stepped straight out of the 19th century. Inside are scores of brick stables, painted green, a veterinary hospital, dozens of training carriages, paddocks, riding ring and jumping course. And 400 military

This is the headquarters for the Swiss Dragoons, the last cavalry force left in rope. Until early this month, it looked as if even the Swiss were to lose their mounted troops in favor of more modern

The campaign against the Dragoons began in March when Defense Minister Rudolf Gnaegi announced plans to disband the cavalry to strengthen armored units which are short of men.

The cavalry buffs struck back Petitions protesting the decision were signed by 432,000 (of 6.5 million) Swiss citizens, Support for the Dragoons was of every political stamp: it came from the right (rural con-servatives with an emotional attachment to the mounted troops) and the left, which views tha cavalry as the least formidable branch of the military.

The Vote

Faced with this unexpected display of public sentiment, the Swiss lower house of parliament voted on Oct. 2 (IHT, Oct. 4) to retain the cavalry, but reduced it from 18 to 12 squadrons, with a total of 2,600 men, as opposed to a former strength of 3,500.

The compromise pleases neither the cavalry proponents who think the 12 squadrons are too few to be effective, nor the armor advocates, who see the Dragotals as a useless anathronism.

"The rationale for this decision is purely emotional and political not military," says one Defense Ministry official. "We should have kept a few platoous for communist. purposes. Now we have to find additional manpower for the two new armor bat-

In contrast, Col. Josef Lochrer, a professional cavalryman and the post veterinarian, argues: "In a hilly country like Switzerland, horses can get through terrain and snow that bog down vehicles. And horses don't run out of fuel.

"The cavelry can use our forests along the frontier for cover from enemy fire. The Dragoons carry automatic rifles, light machine guns and basookss—as much as light infantry. We think the cavalry should be retained because a military force shouldn't put all its eggs in one basket."

Active Duty

The Swiss Army, somewhat like Israel's. is mostly a ready-reserve force, with about 500 full-time officers and 600 noncommissioned officers. At any given time, the number of men on active duty is about 20,000, though 500,000 men can be quickly mobilized. About 150 cavalrymen are assigned to reconnaissance duty on maneuvers with divisional troops.

Sentiment and polemic aside, it is unlikely that the usefulness of the cavalry in a modern war will ever be put to the test: The Swiss Army has not fought a battle since 1815.

Be that as it may, each year the government buys 600 to 650 horses for tha cavalry. After they have been trained by instructors in Bern, they are sold to Drugoon rectuits for about half pribe.

The Dragoon spends the last three weeks of his four-month basic course with his newly purchased mount, and then goes on reserve duty taking his horse and his wespons home with him....

In the past Swiss cavalrymen, like their counterparts in other countries, considered themselves the clite of the armed forces. Some Dragoons still oo, emphasizing their Korpageist or espect de corps

Since Dragoons must look after their own horses, they tend to come from well-to-do families which can afford stables or from rural ones with farms.

This of course makes the Dragoons highly visible in their local communities. They spear at country fairs and are always ready to turn out for parades or horse shows.

Perhaps this explains why many Swiss share the sentiments of the chief of staff, Georg Vischer, who when its heard that the cavalry was to be detended action the cavalry was to be dishanded, said: Our Dragoons, until now linked to nature through the noble horse, will in the future have to live with a conglomeration of steel. electronics and grease without a soul."

Even Col (ret.) Pierre de Muralt, who, as commander of the cavalry and mechanized forces from 1948 to 1987, was responsible for modernizing the armored corps, still thinks "there's a place in this country for the cavalry" although "we need our tanks."

Then, sitting back in his study surrounded by mementoes of his days as a Dragoon officer, he puffed at his pipe and

"Armor is efficient and necessary. But the cavalry, ah, the cavalry is beautiful. C Los Angeles Times.
